

Reporting Wildlife Crime

Evidence

You may consider blowing the whistle on wildlife crime if you have first-hand knowledge of the wrongdoing and documents that confirm the illegal activities.

Collecting and organizing evidence of the wildlife crime you observe is critical. Law enforcement agencies are more likely to investigate tips when they are supported by hard evidence:

- Photographs
- E-mails
- Business Cards
- Scientific Reports
- Billing Records
- Budget and Financial Data
- Internal Reports
- Meeting Notes
- Video & Voice Recordings
- Scientific Test Results
- Transit Routes & Transport Methods
- Bank Account Information
- Evidence of Bribery and Money Laundering

REWARDS FOR CONFIDENTIALLY
REPORTING
WILDLIFE
CRIME

Individuals who have information concerning violations of wildlife protection laws in ANY nation are strongly advised to seek legal representation to ensure their information is handled securely.