

Facebook Radical Connections 12 September 2019 Update

For years, Facebook has touted its artificial intelligence (AI) as part of the company's efforts to combat extremism on the platform. But that same technology is also aiding extremists. A May 2019 report released through the National Whistleblower Center (NWC) and reported by the Associated Press identified dozens of business pages for terrorist and neo-Nazi groups – all created by Facebook.¹ Since the release of the report, the company has done little to address this issue. Nearly 200 auto-generated business pages for the Islamic State were recently identified, and dozens more pages for other terrorist groups including Al Qaeda and Ansar Al Sharia remain on the site.

Facebook has been slow to address terrorist content on its platform in part due to the Communications Decency Act Section 230 (CDA 230). The immunities provided by CDA 230 leave little incentive for companies to effectively monitor content posted by third-parties. However, the auto-generation of business pages for terrorist groups is not the result of third-party postings, it is first-party content produced by Facebook. The creation of these pages is not a flaw in Facebook's algorithms, it's a feature, and one that is not properly monitored.

The presence of these pages not only creates venues for extremists to "like" a particular group's page as a show of support, but it also signals to terrorist groups that they are welcome on Facebook.

Senator Ron Wyden has said that CDA 230 was meant to be both a "sword and a shield," protecting companies while giving them the tools to take down harmful content.² But Facebook hasn't just failed to use its sword, it's thrown the sword away altogether.

The May 2019 report released through the NWC exhibited how Facebook's feature for auto-generating content can be utilized by terrorist groups and neo-Nazis to expand their reach.³ The creation of these pages contradicts the company's own claims of how it targets and removes terrorist content. Facebook's "Hard Questions" on terrorism details the company's efforts, noting that it specifically focuses on Al Qaeda and the Islamic State in its tactics of targeting terrorist content.⁴ But even that focus has proven ineffective. The report found multiple auto-generated pages for the very groups that Facebook claims to target.

In a June 4 speech on the House floor, Congressman Max Rose called out Facebook's creation of auto-generated pages and the fact that the company was not effectively policing its content. In his speech, Rose said "what is even more striking, is before coming to speak on the House floor today, I checked and this profile is still up there! This profile that the AP reported to Facebook is still up there.”⁵

Researchers monitored the pages cited in the report following its release to identify any changes in Facebook’s efforts. The whistleblower report included direct hyperlinks to each of the auto-generated pages identified, creating a roadmap for the company to follow should it want to remove the content.⁶ The pages remained active and untouched until June 25, 2019, one day before Facebook’s Head of Global Policy Management, Monica Bickert, was slated to appear before Congress for a hearing on extremism on social media. While Facebook attempted to delete some of the auto-generated pages before the hearing not all of them were removed.

The House Homeland Security Committee held a hearing on “Examining Social Media Companies’ Efforts to Counter Online Terror Content and Misinformation” on June 26, 2019 to address the way technology firms are handling extremist content on their platforms.⁷ Bickert’s testimony claimed that Facebook was proactive in its identification of terrorist content, “Importantly, we do not wait for ISIS or Al Qaeda to upload content to Facebook before placing it into our internal detection systems. Instead, we proactively go after it.”⁸

Rose again raised the issue of the auto-generated pages in the June 26th hearing. He called on Facebook to explain how an English-language auto-generated page for Al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula remained active, complete with an auto-filled image of the bombed U.S.S. Cole.⁹

*So, Ms. Bickert, why when the Whistleblower Foundation reveals that Facebook is establishing, through its AI platform, Al Qaeda community groups such as this one, a local business Al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula with 217 followers... Why is this still up? We have every right right now to feel as if you are not taking this seriously, and by we, I mean not Congress but the American people.*¹⁰

Rose called the fact that social media companies hide behind AI “insulting.”¹¹ The page he identified in the hearing remained active for a week afterward. While the page Rose identified in the hearing was later removed, it was just one of many that Facebook has auto-generated and failed to address.

Congressman Max Rose holds up his phone with an auto-generated page for Al Qaeda at a House Homeland Security Committee hearing on June 26, 2019.

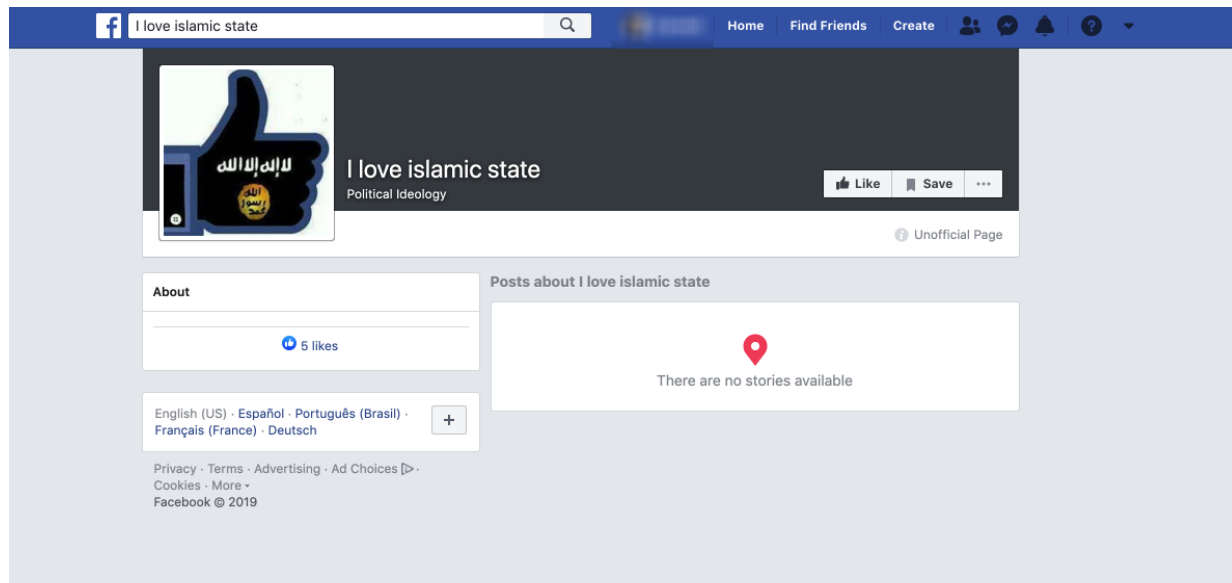

As of September 11, 2019, there were at least 191 pages for the Islamic State that were auto-generated by Facebook. While all of the pages identified included variations of spellings for words like “Iraq,” “Syria,” and “Caliphate,” the words “Islamic State” were spelled correctly in all 191 pages. None of the pages identified were caught by Facebook’s AI, which the company has alleged is designed to target the Islamic State.

In Bickert’s testimony before the House Homeland Security Committee hearing on June 26, she noted “we remove any content that praises or supports terrorists or their actions whenever we become aware of it.” But simple searches on Facebook uncover hundreds of profiles praising terrorist groups both in Arabic and in English. One individual named Mohammed Atta even built his entire profile on support for terrorist groups.¹² For each position listed in his profile, Facebook created a supporting page where one did not previously exist. Atta’s profile and all of the related pages remained active as of September 12, 2019.

Among the nearly 200 auto-generated pages supporting the Islamic State was one called “I love Islamic State.” Facebook labeled the page as a Political Ideology, and the auto-generated page included an image of a Facebook thumbs up with the terrorist group’s logo in the center. The page shows clear support for terrorism, in violation of Facebook’s policies, but was created by Facebook and remains active.

The pages identified varied in their categorization by Facebook, including classifications like “local business,” “political ideology,” “college and university,” and “religious place of worship.” Among the 191 pages were two Islamic State location pages, both created by Facebook, and both have remained active for years. Location pages allow users to post and interact, making them a conduit for terrorists and sympathizers to connect and communicate easily.

Facebook does not include a creation date on its auto-generated pages. As a result, the exact age of the pages is unknown, but some pages could be relatively dated using Google cache. If the pages were captured by Google cache, we know they have been active since at least the date of Google capture, likely earlier.

At least nine of the pages identified were active on or before the June 26 House hearing. More than 62% of the 191 pages were captured in Google cache after the House hearing, with 120 pages captured between July (40), August (73), and September 10 (7). There was no discernable date available for the remaining 62 pages.

Facebook made attempts to remove the auto-generated pages ahead of the house hearing, but their attempts appear limited to the pages highlighted by the AP and through the whistleblower report. Facebook has removed or deactivated the auto-generated pages for Islamist terrorist groups mentioned in the first report – but only those groups. With nearly 200 auto-generated pages in English alone, it does not appear the same effort was undertaken in the months since the June hearing. The Islamic State pages created by Facebook were not the only extremist pages identified, more than a dozen auto-generated pages for other terrorist groups were found.

An auto-generated page for the terrorist group Ansar al-Sharia, which has generated over 2,400 likes, was cited and linked in an academic article in 2015 as an example of a page that young radicals use to stay connected with one another.¹³ While it does not appear in the Google cache, the article makes clear that the page has been active since at least 2015.

Facebook has testified before Congress that its efforts to combat terrorism on the platform are proactive, evidence shows that their takedown has been primarily reactive to information provided in the press or pressured by Congress. Facebook is essentially providing free advertising to terrorist groups. It is clear the company has made no effort to change its auto-generation feature since its last hearing before U.S. lawmakers.
